Saint Louis University is one of the partner organizations of the Asian Development Bank (ADB) that provides assistance to the City of Baguio in putting up the Smart Flood Early Warning, Information and Mitigation System project into action through the ASEAN Australia Smart Cities Trust Fund (AASCTF). The project used cutting-edge technologies to help the city with both planning for flood control and providing flood early warning and response services. The project produced three results: (i) a real-time data collection system was built in four river basins in City; (ii) flood mitigation action plan was created; and (iii) a smart flood early warning information system (FEWS) was established and operational.

A milestone under the Promotion of Low Carbon Urban Transport Systems in the Philippines (LCT) Project, co-implemented by the Department of Transportation (DOTr) and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) with the support of the Global Environment Facility, local government units, transport cooperatives, and universities pledged to carry on with the promotion and adoption of low carbon transport systems in their respective localities.

Since 2020, the LCT pilot cities of Baguio, Iloilo, Pasig and Sta. Rosa, along with General Santos City, have made significant accomplishments by paving the way to transition to electric vehicles (EV) for public transport, as well as promoting non-motorized means of transport such as cycling and walking. These efforts are expected to contribute to reducing greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions and improving air quality.

Secretary Bautista signed a MOA with each of the four pilot cities of Baguio, Iloilo, Pasig, and Sta. Rosa on continuing the implementation of low carbon transport programs, including an amended agreement signed with Dalan ni Taltalak consortium of Baguio City with Mayor Magalong. Key representatives from the academe, including Engr. Jeffrey Des Binwag, Dean of St. Louis University's School of Engineering and Architecture, Engr. Jeferd Saong, Dean of the University of Baguio's School of Engineering and Architecture, and Engr. Dexter Hansel Apnoyan, Dean of University of the Cordilleras' College of Engineering and Architecture, also participated in the ceremony.

<https://www.slu.edu.ph/2023/09/22/slu-strengthens-its-community-extension-program-with-ncip-car-and-partner-community-in-domolpos-itogon-benguet/>

Through a coordination meeting on held on 22 September 2023, Saint Louis University (SLU) further strengthened its Community Extension Program with the National Commission on Indigenous Peoples-Cordillera Administrative Region (NCIP-CAR) and the partner community in Sitio Domolpos, Tinongdan, Itogon, Benguet. The willingness and capacity of the Iwak Tribe of Domolpos to embrace coffee tourism while preserving their cultural heritage is a significant undertaking requiring the consent of all parties involved. As such, to strengthen this partnership, NCIP Representatives presented details of the work and financial plan for certification processing, involving a series of steps to safeguard the Indigenous People's interests. This was followed by a meeting of minds in pursuit of the sustainable goals of the extension program on Coffee Tourism: A Community Development Project of Saint Louis University.
