Saint Louis University, in partnership with the 2024 Academy for Women's Entrepreneurs (AWE), conducted a comprehensive livelihood and empowerment program on November 7, 2024, in Happy Hollow, designed to uplift non-working mothers through practical skills and training.

The program equipped participants with essential entrepreneurial competencies—from product development and packaging to business compliance and English language enhancement. Through this initiative, participants gained the confidence and capacity to start and sustain their own micro-enterprises.

By promoting economic independence and income generation, the program directly contributes to Sustainable Development Goal 1 (No Poverty)—reducing financial vulnerability and improving food security for families and communities.
