SLU Tracks Women's Application Rate Through Its Information Systems & Technology Service Department

Saint Louis University tracks of women's application rate through its Information Systems and Technological Service Department (ISTSD) and University Registrar's Office.

It serves as the university's main IT and digital infrastructure arm, responsible for managing campus networks, internal databases, data security, and digital portals. On the other hand, the University Registrar's office is tasked mainly with the responsibility for the Custody, Integrity, Management and Release of students records which are vital to the operation of any educational institution.

Through this close coordination, SLU ensures that women's application rate and acceptance rate are measured systematically.
